BETHEL AGAIN DEFEATS LOVELL

Bethel Holds Lovell to a 6-1 Score at Lovell

The locals made it three out of four against Lovell by taking last Sunday's game 6 to 1.

The contest was featured by the bunched hitting and head-up baseball of the Bethel aggregation.

Gill, pitching for Bethel, held Lovell scoreless until the sixth inning, when they managed to squeeze across their lone tally. The Bethelites scored two runs in the third on some fast base running by Goddard and hits by Bartlett and Robertson. Wheeler added one to our total in the fifth on a beautiful bunt and two wild throws.

The sixth was Bethel's big inning. Bartlett, first man up, was thrown out by the opposing pitcher, "Scotty" got his second hit and went to third on Howe's double. Both men scored on Eldredge's intended sacrifice, the pitcher throwing wild and "Yon" going to second, to be scored by a long hit from the bat of Swan.

This concluded the scoring and thereafter the game became a pitching duel between Bassett and Gill with the latter having the better of the contest.

The game was a remarkable one in several respects. First, there were two double plays, starting from the outfield. Again, every man on the team got a putout and an assist. That is something that this young fan has never heard of before.

Each team made seven hits, and although Bassett mowed down fourteen of the locals he could not keep the hits scattered. Six errors behind him also contributed toward his downfall. Bethel made three errors but two of them were excusable, and these slip-ups were more than offset by dazzling work at all other times. The outfielders were going great guns, Wheeler and Young each making two stellar catches while Swan contributed three.

Robertson featured at bat with three hits out of four times up, while Howe's double was a big help. Vin was robbed of another two bagger in the first by the umpire, when the latter called his hit a foul ball. Continued raw decisions were made by this kindly gentleman (Mr. Cushman) until in the last of the sixth he was removed at popular request. His successor, Kilgore, was, indeed, a great improvement and no further disputes were forthcoming.

Oxford County Fair Has Bad Weather

Oxford County Fair experienced one of the worst weeks in its history this year. It started well Tuesday, but in the afternoon came a thunder shower and the rain continued through Wednesday, giving the Society $7,000 insurance for that day. Thursday was cloudy and the "middle day" was put over to Friday. Although several hundred people were admitted to the grounds Thursday none of the regular program or races were put on that day. The fireworks and vaudeville program came off Friday evening before a large crowd. Four races were run off Saturday and a ball game between Mechanic Falls and Norway was played with a score of 7 to 3 in favor of Mechanic Falls.

CHAIRMAN THURSTON ASKS FOR RECOUNT

Request has been filed at the office of Secretary of State Edgar C. Smith by Paul C. Thurston of Bethel, chairman of the Democratic county committee of Oxford county, for an inspection of the ballots in the towns of Buckfield, Sumner, Hartford, Hebron, Canton, and Dixfield in the contest of Oscar E. Turner of Hartford, Democrat, vs. Rollin N. Stetson of Sumner, Republican, for representative to the Legislature.

Mr. Thurston in his petition stated that it appeared from newspaper accounts that Mr. Stetson won by five votes.

Secretary Smith informed Mr. Thurston that the ballots from these towns had not all been returned to the State House and that when they were returned a date would be set for this inspection.

It Was "Blind Man's Luck"

By HELEN R. BARTON
(Copyright.)

"YOU are making a mistake, my boy," said Stephen Brand to his nephew, "Money isn't everything. You can win and lose a whole lot of money but the sunsets and rainbows and beauties of nature can only do your soul good through the medium of your eyes. It is a mistake to risk possible blindness for money and the things it can buy!"

The telephone shrilled and Dexter Brand went smiling to answer it, his fine old uncle's advice already slipping heedlessly away.

Dexter left the telephone, having promised to take Adele Merner to the theater that night and a night club afterward. It was because of Adele that Dexter was driving himself on to possible wealth. Adele with the cor-color hair and the comely eyes and the eager, greedy pursuit of everything that was new, expensive and interesting, Adele who inspired a fellow to tread the rays clouds of high romance with her soft, tender, babyish little ways, so cleverly concealing the hard, brittle, calculating spirit underneath.

"Did you see a doctor, Dex," asked Adele as she shuffled down to the roadster that night on the way to the theater.

"Advised me to lay off—get away from my invention!"

"Oh! But why? Is he afraid? Why did he advise that, Dex?"

"Oh, he mentioned possible blindness, later on!"

"But Dexter—not before you've finished your invention!" asked Adele, a sharp little clip to her usually soft voice.

"Oh, no. I'll have that done. Don't worry. I only saw one specialist; another might disagree entirely with him!"

"There's a young lady waiting in the reception room," announced Biggs, Uncle Steve's aged butler, a few days later. "She said something about an ad."

Grabbing his aching eyes nervously with his thin hands, Dexter gazed upon the most beautiful girl he had ever seen.

"You wanted a secretary who understood mechanical business enough to take notes, and I feel qualified, because I'm a real big girl with an invention!"

The wife was low and sweet; in perfect keeping with her beauty, Dexter decided, and he smiled as he said:
"I'm sure you'll do. But the salary is so, it, and you'll have to live here with my wife and me. I work all hours, you know?"

"That will be quite all right; I'm familiar with the erratic hours of invention!" she said, smiling, and Dexter forgot his eyes for the first time in many weeks.

In the sparkling light of an afternoon, the great square figure of a man in a green band stood feverishly at a work bench. At his side, a girl with curling, coppery hair working equally fast at a note book.

The telephone rang and Sheila Merner went reluctantly to answer it.
"Your son, Mr. Brand, Miss Merner?"

"Dexter," said Dexter into the receiver. "It's impossible, Adele, Oh, be gentle, for Dexter's sake! I won't be more than a day more."

Then a sharp knock on a pain, a moment of doubt and then: "Find a long, will you, Mrs. Brand—the light switch to have left on. What? My God! And that was how Dexter Brand found himself suddenly stopped just as sure as he had come with in reach.

Adele went around the next week after she had ascertained definitely from Sheila Merner that Dexter might be blind a lifetime and that he had most certainly and finished the invention that was to make him rich and famous.

"I guess you were right, dearie," remarked Dexter one morning. "I should have started to stop up a few more eyes, with my eyes. Now I've lost the eyes and the possible money, too!
And even the woman I loved turned me down."

"I used to think that Sheila liked me a little," he went on, "but even she seems to have forgotten me."

"Oh, so I haven't, I've just been busy," remarked Sheila who had just come in. "I've been down to register your patent and see a specialist."

"Why?" demanded the blind man
"Surely not for money! You alone know how little I had!"

"No! Can't you understand that one does things for other reasons?"

"Yes, I know that, now. But even if you did—like me a lot, I may never be able to see you!"

"That's true, because I wouldn't marry you if you were well. And I'm pretty certain that you won't be blind very long—just if this German specialist is right!"

"If you mean that you care enough for me to marry me—now?" asked Dexter softly.

"If you don't ask me pretty soon your chance will be gone!"

"Come here, you darling," he said, and under the moon, and when she stood before him, he rose wondrously, and gathered her long into his arms, murmuring incoherent terms of endearment.

A long time later, after Sheila had gone, he told his amazing tale to his dear old uncle, smiling, "Blind man's luck, eh?"

CAP
AND

DEVELOPMENT

"Less than two years ago," said the professional booster, with a wide sweep of his arms to include a new outlying area of his city, "this was all farm land."

"Is that so?" said the visitor, who was somewhat artistic and had a sense of beauty, as he looked over the shacks, pools of stagnant water, abandoned motor cars, and so on. "Is that so? That's too bad."

Quite All Right

The elderly lady was comfortably enjoyed on the first green of the public golf course.

"Do you think that's a very safe place to sit, ma'am?" asked an approaching golfer.

"Oh, yes, it's perfectly all right," beamed the dear lady, "you see, I'm sitting on a newspaper."

In Other Words

Patron—My watch which I bought from you has stopped. What is the matter with it?

Jeweler—It is a victim of what the doctors call "cachexia."

Patron—What in the world does
"cachexia" mean?

Jeweler—It means it's run down.

Earning a Living

"You wish to earn your own living?"
"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne.

"Your tastes are luxurious."
"There lies the trouble. I don't believe that I could be content with the sort of living I'd be able to earn."— Washington Star.

MADE HUSBAND HOT

She—They say clothes make the man.
He—I know his wife's clothes make him hot under the collar.

Wouldn't Fit

Mrs. Todd—Convin Dorothy, you know, always wanted to have a little baby daughter so she could name her
"June."

Mrs. Ashit—Yes. Did she do it?
Mrs. Todd—No. The man she married was named "Ben" and it wouldn't do, you see.

The Horror of Uncertainty

Sympathetic Neighbor—I hear you lost your husband. It's a terrible thing.

Widow—Yes, indeed. You know what you're losing, but you don't know what you'll get the next time.

Just a Shell

Wife—I hear you've built a new home.

Husband—Yes, but I don't know what it's going to be a mansion, villa, bachelor or widow's home—my wife hasn't bought the furniture yet.

In Touch With Royalty

"In you know, I was quite close to royalty yesterday, you see!" said Peggy.
"Really?" said Uncle.

"Yes," said Peggy. "I was along by a queen bee!"

HOW HE KILLED 'EM

Robb—"How a lady killer?" Blah!
"Yes, keeps 'em out all evening dancing and never buys 'em anything to eat!"

Price No Object

Salesman—This kettle costs more and the other one holds more.
Mrs. Nowells—Give me the other.
It my husband is hungry the price tag wouldn't help much.

Who'd Have Thought It?

"Haven't you heard? Mary just was shot right here!"
"Shot here?" Not really? Why that was the man she was engaged to?"

STATE HIGHWAY CONFERENCE
AT AUGUSTA

Among the topics scheduled for discussion at the State Highway Conference in the House of Representatives, Thursday, September 26, which is being held under the auspices of the Maine Automobile Association, the State of Maine Division of the American Automobile Association, there are four major topics which are constantly demanding the attention of communities everywhere and which, in view of the problem in our own state today, are of unusual significance.

One of these subjects, and the one around which most interest seem to make itself shown, is that of good roads.
Mr. Finis G. Crawford, Professor of Political Science at Syracuse University, will speak at the Conference on "The Value of Maine Highways".
Professor Crawford is the author of several books and has made a most comprehensive study of the highway problem and its relation to gasoline and motor vehicle taxes.

Hon. Benjamin G. Eymon, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles of the State of Pennsylvania, for the past ten years, for two years President of the Eastern Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators, and a member of the General Committee of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety since its organization in 1923, will lead the discussion on the topic "How the State Police plays an important part in the Prevention of Accidents".

The subject of "Public Safety" will be ably handled by Mr. Robert Cair, Chief Highway Safety Engineer for the Liberty Mutual Insurance Company of Boston, Chairman of the Taxicab and Fleet Owners' Section of the National Safety Council; a contributor to various public safety and a lecturer of National reputation on various phases of careful driving and the problems of highway safety.

Several other speakers will address the conference which is open to the public and which will commence promptly at 10 o'clock Standard Time.

it is a novelty.

WEST PARIS

Miss Mabel F. Knight gave a very interesting lecture on Our American Indian and A Day in Camp with the Omahas, at Good Will Hall Monday evening. Her interpretation of their customs, religion, singing, dancing and general living was very instructive.
Miss Knight comes from Boston and has made a study of Indian life and is a writer on Indian topics. For the past seven years she has been coming to Poland Springs. The audience was not as large as could have been wished on account of the severe electrical shower followed by rain, but was much larger than could have been expected.

Frank Lang, one of the old citizens of the village is very ill. Mr. Lang was very unfortunate in having to have his eyes removed two or three years ago.

Rev. Josephine Folsom of Pittsfield, vice-president of the Woman's National Missionary Association, will preach at the Universalist church Sunday, Sept.
23, at the usual hour.

Miss Ella Curtis is the guest of Mrs.
Dean Wheeler of Oakland.

Mrs. Laura Houghton of Auburn has moved to her new bungalow on Main Street. Mrs. Houghton lived at West Paris before her marriage, and the house is built on land which her father, the late Elban Willis, owned.

Miss Delia Lane, who has been quite ill, is sufficiently recovered to take short walks on the street.

Miss Ruth Cole has been spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Rose Cole.

Prof. Howard R. Emery has resigned his position as teacher of history at Hubron Academy, and will take a graduate course at Harvard University.

Mrs. Edna Richardson has entered Gorham Normal School.

Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson of Buck-field were guests a day or two last week of Rev. Eleanor B. Forbes.

Mrs. Herbert Hill and daughter Charlotte are visiting relatives in Boston.

Edward W. Murdock of Arlington, Mass., was the guest of H. R. Tuell last week. Mr. Murdock comes every year to attend the county fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Johnson and family have returned from a week's visit with relatives at Groveton, N. H.

Dr. Charles Packard of Lawrence,
Mass., Albert Packard of Lisbon Falls, Alton Packard of Massachusetts, and Corry Packard from the Middle West, were callers one day last week at F. H.
Hill's. They are cousins of Mrs. F.
H. Hill.

Gertrude Emery returned to Augusta with her sister Edith and will attend school there.

Mrs. Martha Kendall is working at Guy Curtis' in Norway.

Mrs. Frances Perkins Billings of Gorham, N. H., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Truman Emery. Mrs. Billings has recently undergone a very serious operation for the removal of tonsils at the Berlin, N. H., hospital.

Miller Tires

Robertson Service Station
Railroad St., Bethel, Maine

If you buy your tires from a mail order house do you call the mailman to fix a flat or to put air in your tires? Of course you don't because the mailman is not responsible for what you buy away from home. Neither do you get any satisfaction from the mail order house.

Buying from a mail order house you naturally think that you are saving a lot of money, but in the long run are you? Do you get a tire that is made by a concern with a reputation to uphold or do you get a tire that is made especially for this kind of trade?

Buying tires from your home town tire dealer is in itself a guarantee that the tire you buy will give you perfect satisfaction. Your home town merchant has a reputation for square dealing and he is not going to sell you a tire that is not perfect in every way.

Remember, the mail man does not fix flats, but your local tire dealer does.

THE BUYERS OF 110,000,000 TIRES

Can't Be Wrong!

Goodyear has built and sold more than One Hundred and Ten Million Tires—millions more than any other manufacturer.

Goodyear uses nearly one seventh of all the crude rubber produced annually on the earth—50 per cent more than any other manufacturer.

Year in and year out—for more than ten years Goodyear has held undisputed leadership in the tire field.

Goodyear builds the World's Greatest Tire—the acknowledged standard of quality.

More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind. In this newspaper, in nearly every magazine you pick up, on the billboards—everywhere tire advertising appears you will find a lot of extravagant statements and heavy claims.

Up and down the streets and in and out alleys tire dealers feed the public on "Special Deals," "Big Sales," "Below Cost," the best this—the best that and a lot of other applesauce. In the face of all this, aren't a few facts refreshing?

Because after all, what you want is a good dependable place to go where you will get the most for every tire dollar you lay on the counter.

You get just that, plus our prompt, expert, courteous service, when you step in here and buy a Goodyear Tire.

SAYS THE OWL

Some men know what to do to be a go-getter, but they are too lazy.

History repeats itself; and there are many who run risks to see if it will.

If a person begins "I don't want to hurt your feelings," stop him right there.

People who get into bad scandale may inspire sympathy, but they shouldn't try to lead.

When you talk to yourself, you don't have to think twice before speaking. There's something in that.

If every man loved his work and most of the manufacturing were done by hand, there would be a shortage of waterpieces.

IT MAY BE SO, BUT—

I am not a candidate.

I was dead with fright.

I believe in free speech.

I do not aspire to fame.

I will let you try to sue.

I never lied to my parents.

I am the captain of my soul.

I can take it or leave it alone.

I never spend more than I make.

I am the boss of my household.

I could quit smoking if I wished.

I care for the man, and the party.

I care not what the world may say.

I wouldn't do it for a million dollars.

I would rather be right than President.

I wouldn't have it if they gave it to me.

I never took a dishonest dollar in my life.

I have never had a quarrel with my wife.

I never taken faster than twenty miles an hour.

I make it a rule never to do any thing of which I may be ashamed.

I shall be contented with the office of a good husband.

The Son of the Big Boss

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

IT WAS young Mary Dole who carried her father's lunch down to the railroad yards every noon for years, until Mary entered high school, and her father was promoted from his outdoor job to a desk position inside the large railroad building. After that, her parents forbade the girl from the yards, and Mary just went to school like dozens of other girls of her age. In the course of time she went to college and worked her own way through to a glorious graduation. She came home quite unexpectedly one day, and after greeting her mother, flew down to the office to see her father.

James Dole had now a still better job than his last one. As for pretty Mary Dole, her eyes were as blue as the sky and her hair as black as midnight. Her lovely skin grew quite pink when her big father stood up and opened his arms wide.

"It is getting toward my closing time," observed Mr. Dole after awhile, "and I have to go through the yard to see a man. You might as well trot along."

So Mary trotted alongside of her father, and here and there she saw a familiar face that she smiled at and sometimes stopped and talked.

And then, all of a sudden, the most wonderful thing was happening to pretty Mary Dole. Her blue eyes had met the admiring gaze of a young man in overalls and jumper—a rather greasy young man who had a smudge of black across one tanned cheek. Just like some gay romantic mark worn by a dashing cavalier, Mary's heart jumped as he smiled and nodded up at her big father, and she noticed that all the men she had met, he was the only one who doffed his black cap when he saw her.

"Oh, daddy, who is that young man?" whispered Mary when they were at last in the car, turned toward home.

Mr. Dole kept his eyes straight ahead on the road and answered carelessly. "Oh, that's only a young fellow who's learning the railroad business."

"Invite him out to the house, daddy, please."

"Can't be done, little girl. That's the son of the big boss."

"Not P. J. Donovan's son, father?"

"It is the same—it's young P. J. —he only graduated from college in June, with great baseball honors. And right here he came, the day after the Fourth of July, ready for work."

A few days ago when he saw her, Mr. Dole said nothing more, but the next night, when P. J. came with an old little thrill that she had never felt before. Occasionally she met him on the street, and always his hat came off, as if he were in the presence of some great lady, but he always fixed his eyes straight ahead as if she did not exist.

"Just like a peasant lad acknowledging the presence of royalty, and never presuming to gaze upon royalty's face," mused Mary Dole.

Summer passed into fall, and Mary Dole was appointed to one of the local schools. She was not disappointed when she discovered that the school was situated not far from the railroad shops, for here the children of the workers came.

New Mary said P. J. Jr., quite often, but they never spoke, never even smiled, unless, perhaps, a smile in the least night court.

Young P. J. once greeted his teeth when he was alone because he often thought of pretty Mary and how she must attract other young men as well as himself. He wanted the chance to win her. But he had promised his father not to "batter the girls" when he was teaching the business.

"I will go home and tell dad about it," mused young P. J. one day. He got into his high-powered car, and drove into another city, where he found his father.

"What's up, Patsy, that you came looking around at this time of day?" asked the old man.

"It's a girl, father," said Patsy. "I met her at the school."

"What's her name?" asked Patsy.

"Her name's Mary. I've never spoken a word to her, but she is the dearest thing I ever saw. She's like 'em been through college, teaches school. Her name's Mary Dole."

"Humph. Any relation to Jim Dole down there?"

"His daughter," said Patsy.

"Well, now, Patsy, let's get home and talk to mother about Mary Dole."

The next morning young P. J. Jr. came back to the railroad shops a man to the last. His father had promised to drop a line to Mr. Dole and tell him to invite the boy to supper.

That is how it happened that young Patsy was introduced to lovely Mary Dole from that time on, love was one sweet song, indeed.

It was not until after they were married that Mary told Patsy that she liked him mostly because he was like his father. "You are so square—Patsy, dear, and my father always says that old man was in the square, all around him to ever met."

THE CRUELTY OF STEEL TRAPS

Ernest Thompson Bates relates the following account in his "Wild Life at Home":

A few days ago while walking with a friend in the woods we came on a skunk. My companion shouted to the dog and captured him to save him from a possible disaster, then called to me to keep back and let the skunk run away. But the fearless one in white and orange did not run, and I did not keep back, but I walked up very gently. The skunk stood his ground and raised his tail high over his back, the sign of fight. I talked to him, still drawing nearer, then when only ten feet away, was surprised to see that one of his feet was a trap and terribly mangled.

I stopped down saying many pleasant things about my friend's, etc. The skunk's tail slowly lowered and I came closer up. Still I did not care to handle the wild and tormented thing on such short acquaintance, so I put a small barrel and quickly placed it over him, then moved the trap and brought him home, where he is now living in peace and comfort.

I wanted this to show how gentle and judicious a creature the skunk is when gentle and judiciously approached. It is a good commentary on our mode of dealing with wild life when I add that an afterward appeared this skunk had been struggling in the torture of that trap for three days and three nights.

It Is Disappointing

AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION

What it is hoped will be the greatest air demonstration in the history of the country will be one of the features of the American Legion national convention at San Antonio, Texas, Oct. 8 to 12, according to Philip B. Stapp, general convention director.

Plans are being pushed forward rapidly by the Legion convention bureau in co-operation with the San Antonio chapter of the National Aeronautics Association, whose local vice president, E. A. Feille, is chairman of the aerodromics committee.

One thousand planes flying in a single formation over this city, and of the army's new "West Point of the Air", is the committee's goal. Every prominent civilian pilot is being invited to attend, by a personal letter and by invitation at the national air races at Los Angeles. The war department, which has already promised to send its best fliers to take part in the convention air circus, is being asked to order every war time pilot and to service to San Antonio for a great war pilot reunion.

Allied governments are each being invited to send squadrons, made up as far as possible of World War aerodromes are being invited from Mexico, Cuba and Canada.

On "air day" of convention week a new record for animal shipments from one city in a single day will be sought. Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, one of the convention's distinguished guests, and other noted pilots will be asked to fly the mail that day. Convention visitors and business houses will all be appealed to to swell the volume of mail.

At the municipal airport at Winburn Field two big air shows will be held, displaying one ship of every type used in commercial or civilian flying in America. Kelly Field will exhibit all army types.

Cities all over Texas are being marked to guide the aviators. Emergency fields at San Antonio are being added and adequate servicing of planes will be provided at these and regular fields. Every available gas truck in the city is being requisitioned. Six hundred airplane mechanics, army and civilian, will be on hand. Blue prints of all fields at San Antonio will be mailed to every pilot.

The N. S. Stowes' newly spool mill at North New Portland burned early Monday morning. The origin of the fire is not known. The stock shed and other nearby buildings were saved.

The mill was practically all ash when discovered.

SOUTH WATERFORD

The informal reception and dance given to Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Hamlin to celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary took place in the Grange Hall on Saturday evening. The genial couple, who have traveled on life's journey for fifty years side by side, received congratulations from a large gathering of relatives, brother and sister Grangers and friends, also in the line for congratulations were the third daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Abbott, who hope to celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at the close of the year. This receiving line was under a very pretty arch of golden rod and asparagus suspended from its center a dainty bell of golden glow. It was indeed a pretty setting.

Andrews' orchestra furnished appropriate music during the reception. Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hamlin led a real old-fashioned march after which Mr. Hamlin spoke a few words of welcome and bade one and all enjoy themselves. During the evening Mrs. Alice Warren served punch. Soon the happy group were led to the dining room where the tables were decorated in beautiful garden flowers, and refreshments of cake, crackers and cookies with ice cream and coffee were served. After this bountiful repast Burton Sanderson in his pleasing manner presented Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin with a very pretty mahogany clock "a souvenir" from the Grange. (The Hamlin family had requested no gifts.)

It was indeed a happy time, not only for Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin and their family but for all present. Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin began their married life in Fairhaven, Conn. Their two oldest daughters were born there. At the death of Mr. Hamlin's father the family moved back to the farm, staying there for five years. Since that time they have lived in our village where Mr. Hamlin has been a very successful business man and has done much to keep Waterford on the map. May they live to enjoy many more years in this happy union.

Joshua Bennett of Bridgton spent the week end at the home of W. K. Hamlin and enjoyed the wedding anniversary celebration.

Richard W. Brown of New York City who has passed the summer with his cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Robbins Plummer left for New York on Friday.

Mrs. Eggs and Mrs. Charles returned to Harrison on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Abbott, Mrs. A. Moore and Ethel, were in Bridgton Sunday, en route to Mr. and Mrs. James Leepold.

Harry Craig and family, Curtis Jennings and Mrs. Emory of Farmington were week end guests of Mrs. Orrie E. Moore at Aberton Cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis of Madison spent the week end at W. W. Abbott's. Their daughter, Ada, who has worked in the Abbott family for a year, has returned home with her parents for a two weeks vacation.

Mrs. Clara F. Sargent had an ill day Monday morning.

W. W. Abbott has sold his fine Jersey bull and five of his registered Jersey cows this past week to Dr. Merrill of South Paris.

Dr. and Mrs. Watson returned to Hallowell, Me., on Sunday after spending the week in town to attend the Oxford County Fair at South Paris.

Several attended church at North Waterford on Sunday when a fine sermon was given by Bishop William Anderson of Bangor. The Methodist Churches of New England.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Roy and little daughter of South Paris have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Collins the past week. Mr. and Mrs. Collins took them home Sunday.

Harry Hayes has been ill the past few days with indigestion.

Vernon Brown, the youngest son of Homer Brown, who has spent the summer with his grandmother, Harriet Brown, has returned to his mother in Harrison. Richard Brown has finished work for George Stevens in East Waterford and is visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Harriet Brown.

Schools opened on Monday. Miss Jane Brown of Allam is on the Primary team and Miss Mabel Swan of South Paris in the Grammar team. The attendance is small this year.

Albert Hamlin has been quite ill with a bad cold.

Wyman Kimball of Sweden has moved his family into the Earl Matr rent at the top of Mill Hill. Mr. Kimball is to take Naomi McAllister's place with Hill & Marr.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Lyman were in town on Monday at his aunt's, Mrs. Martha Perry's.

Annie Gardner has gone to Portland to attend High School.

LOCKE'S MILLS

Deferred

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cole who have spent the summer at their cottage on Round Pond left here Saturday for their home in St. Petersburg, Florida.

Miss Dora Mason is enjoying a week's vacation from her work in the mill and is spending a few days visiting relatives in South Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jordan and Mrs. Ella Jordan of Bethel were calling on friends here the first of the week.

Mrs. George Tirrell is confined to the house with a severe cold.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Abbott and children of Mechanic Falls are vacationing at their camp on Twitchell Pond.

The name of Henry Morgan was drawn for jury duty for the October term of court at South Paris.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION ISSUES BOOK ON STATE'S AGRICULTURE

"A national habit of recreational literature is to blaze trans-continental motor tours, inter-state tours and with-in-state tours describing points of recreational or scenic beauty that one may expect to see along the way. Why not an Agricultural Tour—why not a trip to see where our food staples are grown, and how grown?"

Answering his own question, Vice C. Isola, executive secretary of the Maine Development Commission, has compiled an Agricultural Tour of Maine. This is the first detailed work of the Commission on the Agriculture of the state, and it covers every leading farming enterprise from the coast to the Canadian border. It is illustrated with more than fifty photographs and full page color plates, with a scenic cover in color. Ten different authorities on various farming activities contributed articles on these subjects. These articles are arrived at, one after the other, as the tour progresses up through the state, bringing in Maine's truck gardening, potato growing, sheep raising, poultry industry, dairying, blueberry packing, apple growing, etc.

Following the same route known as the Grand Tour, Mr. Isola takes the reader on a trip of 1,375 miles, beginning at Kittery, in York County, skirting the coast and swinging north through Aroostook County, and then southward through the western part of the state, ending at Portland. Allusions to historic places of interest, industrial enterprises and scenery provide a background for the person making the "tour" and adding to the reader's understanding of the place each industry holds in the farming of the state. A wealth of anecdotal material fills the book. For example, a reference to little Nadeau Lake, near Fort Fairfield.

"Years ago it was noticed that the bottom of a lake, instead of showing the usual black mud or gravel formation, appeared white, so the neighboring farmers called it 'white mud'. Upon investigation, it was discovered that this 'white mud' was marl lime, or calcium carbonate, of superior quality.

"Along with this discovery came another one, which was that the clover was disappearing from our farms; that the potato industry was being loaded with increasing overhead cost, new diseases were appearing, and greater care than formerly was found necessary in seed selection.

"Here was a problem of increasing seriousness, affecting the prosperity of Aroostook County.

"The answer was, 'Meet it with lime'. The passage goes on to explain the beneficial results of the experiment on Aroostook farms.

Special color illustrations, depicting corn and potato fields, orchards and strawberry patches, along with maps and graphs, enliven the volume, which comprises about 160 pages. Relative to the "tour" idea on which the book is based, Mr. Isola says in a foreword:

"An argument against this may be that such a tour is nothing to arouse interest, to appeal to the aesthetic; it is merely an appeal to the stomach. An answer may be the old adage—'The way to a man's heart is through his stomach, but another is, one would soon tire of just woods, lakes, mountains and ocean in this New England which, to be perfect must show here and there the work of man. A stream, a field, an old rail fence and a dilapidated building in the proper combinations make a picture never to be forgotten. A green hillside, backed by the darker green of the forest and framed in the azure of the skies—with the field, a man-made field, dotted with cattle—what a picture!"

Copies of the book, which is just off the press, will be distributed through the State Grange, to each member of the coming Legislature, to the Agricultural College of the University of Maine and through the Department of Agriculture. Since 3,000 copies will be sent the Eastern states Exposition, and others in reply to requests brought in by the State's national advertising.

One thing that modern young people seem to learn early in life is the location of the nearest place to run into debt.

Singing Coal Shovel
Had Experts Jarred

A few days ago a coal shovel hanging on the wall of the fire brigade station at Bethel, Maine, suddenly assumed the role of a local entertainer, and began to sing, sing, and play!

The firemen were puzzled, and after a closed investigation it appeared that the shovel's performance synchronized with the sending of the local wireless broadcasting station.

In some peculiar manner the shovel acted as an ordinary wireless apparatus. It was found that it was suspended on the wall in such a position that it touched the power line of the Bethel wireless station, and that it reproduced clearly and distinctly everything sent out from that station. Wireless experts, however, have been unable so far to give a satisfactory explanation of the occurrence.—Lan don Tit Bits.

Radio Foiled Burglar

Between numbers of a radio program the wife of a Lexington (N. C.) physician at her home stepped into another room. There a burglar, on the contrary, stepped into the room and the burglar stepped a hand over her mouth. Just then the voice of the burglar came out of the radio in the next room. Without stopping to investigate the source, the burglar jumped out a window and was gone.

Got Ceremony Over Wire

A telephone from afar to bedside enabled a mother at Larch, Wales, to hear her daughter married. Because of illness Mrs. W. H. H. of Larch, was unable to attend the ceremony in the church, so telephones and amplifiers were set up in the cathedral and a special telephone line was run to the bride's home. Mrs. H. heard of a whole of the ceremony distinctly.

The Slippers of Destiny

By JUNE WATSON

RAYMOND found the package on his table when he went up to dress for the Flemings' dance. He had thought that he would give up dancing, but this was a particular occasion, Billy Flemming having a birthday and his wife insisting on a real old-fashioned party.

So Raymond had tied himself to his favorite shoe shop and been fitted to dancing pumps, and the oblong box testified to their arrival at the last minute. Raymond dressed leisurely, and when he had finished he untied the oblong box and opened it.

There he stopped aghast. Instead of a pair of shiny patent leather pumps, he found nestling in the white tissue paper a tin, pair of high-heeled slippers, frivolous cloth of gold trifles that glistened in the light.

"Hang it all—of course, I can't wear these," he told the world in a complaining tone. "Of all the absurd mistakes—well, Mrs. Billy, you can count one dancing man out." He put the little slippers away in his dresser, smiling indulgently at them as he did so. Some little fluffy thing might be signing for those very slippers, but she could not help smiling at the sight of his new and shining pumps when they reached her!

"Not dancing?" asked Mrs. Billy, frowning at him.

He told her that, lacking dancing shoes, he had ordered them and had been disappointed in their delivery.

"You are like poor Nellie Warren—she says she received an enormous pair of men's shoes instead of her own—she is wearing an old pair and is as cross as can be. Go and find her and dance with her—fellow sufferers should console each other."

Raymond skirted the dancers and found a comfortable place for wall flowers. He wondered which girl would prove to be Nellie Warren. He rather liked her name, simple and unassuming, but she would have been spotted in gold slippers!

He felt to watching the dancing feet of the girls, noting the dainty footgear until his eyes were dazzled with the procession of silver slippers and gold slippers and colored ones. Then he started, for tripping along in perfect time to the music's pensive foot, were a tiny pair of shabby gray slippers—they were emergency shoes, he knew, for they were worn with golden hard silk hose and a golden tissue frock.

The girl herself—he caught a glimpse of a dark, bewitching face, golden-brown eyes, a flash of rose color in cheeks and lips, and also was gone. She might not be his Cinderella of the slippers, but she was undoubtedly a wonder-girl.

"Hello!" bellowed Flemming's voice beside him. "Do take care of Miss Warren—Raymond, with Raymond—you've heard of him Nellie; can't dance to night because he hasn't any shoes. I am called to the phone—" He drifted away into the crowd and Raymond smiled down at the wonder girl whom Fate had sent to him.

"Aren't you going to dance?" she asked as her little feet kept time to the alluring music.

He glanced down at his feet. "I might try—I'm a clumsy beggar at my best," he apologized.

"Such a pity," she said teasingly after a while as they paused for breath. "If you only had the stunning pair of patent leather pumps that came to me instead of my own darling golden shoes—you couldn't dance a bit better than you do."

"Is that a compliment or other woe?"

"It isn't otherwise!" she laughed.

Later in the evening they had danced together so often that people were smiling indulgently at Arch Raymond. His appearance at a dance was a mark of signal triumph for his hostess, and that he should be worshipping at the shrine of penniless Nellie Warren was a social triumph for the girl.

They had supper together, and when the huge birthday cake was cut, it was Nellie Warren who found a ring in her slice. "I've had the most delightful time," she sighed as they said good night.

"I shall never forget it," he said gravely. "And perhaps, tomorrow you will let me come and bring Father's slippers."

"You had them?" she gasped.

He smiled. "Mine went to you and came to me. If I had not seen you I should have been a very sorry man."

"I may come," he said to her. "I'll come—I am staying over the night."

So he went home there to the room where the golden slippers were tucked in his dresser. Suppose he did take them out of their wrappings and secretly slip each bit of golden dress—had not their owner danced away into his heart? And she—had not she eyes met?

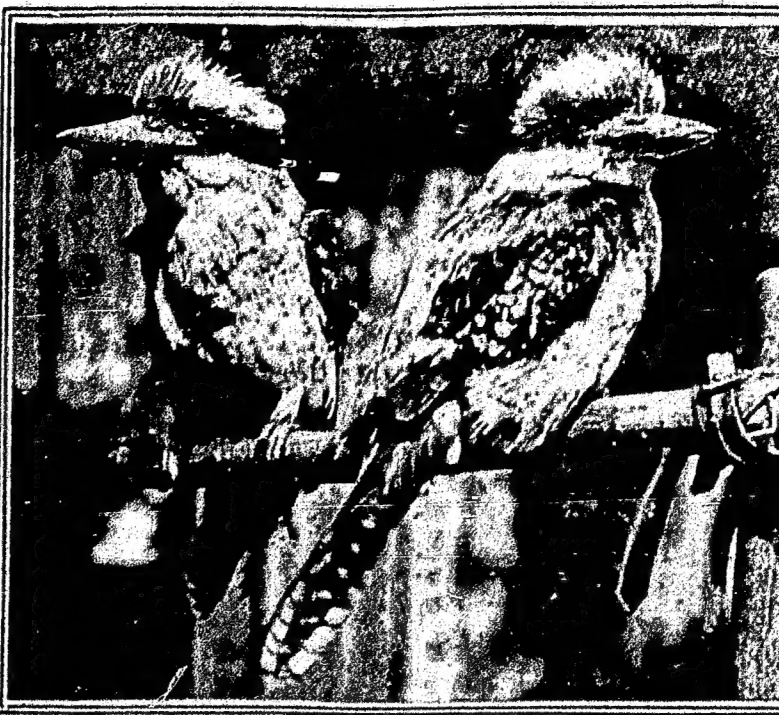

He put the shoes away, his young eyes dreaming.

He knew that love had come at last.

Today's First Duty

The future has the right to some of our thoughts, but not to all of it. The present should engage our first and best attention. The duty of the day, performed in the best of our ability, is the real preparation for the task of tomorrow.—Orin.

ODD THINGS IN AUSTRALIA

"Laughing Jackasses" of Australia.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

AUSTRALIA, possessor of so many features unfamiliar to the rest of the world, might be catalogued by a nature lover by her trees and her birds. One readily understands why the Australian loves his trees. The groves of giant eucalyptus form places never forgotten, and the scent of the wattle brings a home-like feeling like the smell of the sage to a Westerner.

The flora is not only beautiful, it is unique, without counterpart in other lands. Of the many species of plants most of them are purely Australian, and are unknown even in New Zealand. The general impression one gets of Australian forests is their total unlikeness to anything seen elsewhere. The great forests of timber trees are not damp and shaded and all of one species, but are well lighted and filled with other forests of short trees; in places the woods consist of large widely spaced trees surrounded only by bunch grass, and even in areas where there is not to be found on the surface for hundreds of square miles true forests of low trees are present.

Forms which may be recognized as tulip, lily, honeysuckle and fern take on a surprising aspect. They are not garden flowers, but trees, and the landscape of which they form a part reminds one of the hypothetical reconstructions in books of science of a landscape of Mesozoic time, a period antedating our own by millions of years.

The trees are indeed those of a bygone age. In America and Europe shadowy forms of fossil leaves of strange plant species are gathered from the rock and studied with interest; in Australia many of these ancient trees are living. The impression that one is looking at a landscape from other parts of the world is so vivid that the elms and maples and oaks in some of the city streets strike a jarring note. The transition from Jurassic to modern times is painfully abrupt.

With a flora of such great interest, it occasions no surprise to find that Australia is the home of many and most beautiful and that geologic history is a common subject of study in schools.

Eucalyptus the National Tree.

Australia is the home of the wonderful eucalyptus, a tree about which a fair-sized library of books and pamphlets has been written, without exhausting the subject. For geological ages the eucalyptus have remained undisturbed in this "biological backwater," and, spreading over the continent, have adapted themselves to many varieties of soil and climate and elevation. About 300 species have already been discovered in the small part of the continent explored by botanists.

It is a hopeless task for the tourist to gain an acquaintance with this national tree. As he passes through woods and open spaces, seeing trees of widely different aspect—different in form and method of branching, different in color and kind of bark, different in shape and also color of leaf, some oozing gum, others clean and dry—it is disconcerting to be quickly told by his botanical guide that this surprising array of trees "includes only varieties of the genus eucalyptus."

The Australian is likewise embarrassed by these prolific variations of eucalyptus. The trees in general are "gums"—white gums, red gums, blue gums, spotted gums, cabbage gums—or franklin, stringy bark, woolly bark, smooth bark; and when distinctions are necessary we get such technical terms as narrow leaved red franklin, or broad leaved yellow stringy bark.

Wattle That Grew Rapidly.

The eucalyptus include some of the tallest trees in the world. The Victorian forests department records trees which measure 525, 635 and 841 feet, and states that there are "scores of trees about 300 feet in height." The surveyor of the Bushbuck range made notes of the tallest trees killed during an eight year period and reports that "all those measured were over 300 feet in length."

Eucalyptus trees reproduce themselves readily and grow about seven times more rapidly than oak or hickory. From a ton of bark of the glider tree was obtained by analysis 410 pounds of tannin extract and 308 pounds of oleic acid. From the gum and leaves of these trees come also the highly valuable eucalyptus oils, from which no less than twenty-seven constituents have been distilled for pharmaceutical purposes and for the separation of metals by the distillation process.

The eucalyptus is the great timber tree of the continent. Of sixty varieties in Victoria, twenty have great commercial value and are finding an ever-increasing market. The Tasmanian blue gum is one of the strongest, densest, and most durable woods in the world. Timbers 2 feet square, exceeding 100 feet in length, are readily obtained, and, when used for piling, need not be weighted, for the density of the wood is such that it sinks in water. Their strength is twice that of English oak, and they are practically immune from attack by the teredo, which plays such havoc with ordinary timbers.

The jarrah, a eucalyptus of west Australia, is another famous tree. It is one of the few woods of the world which successfully resist the ravages of white ants; it is practically immune from the attacks of marine borers, and, like the iron-bark of Victoria and New South Wales, has been known to withstand fire better than iron girders.

Many Beautiful Birds.

Australia is stocked with beautiful birds, many of them of unusual aspect. The man who originated the popular saying that "Australian birds have plumage, but no song" must have lived in a sound proof box. Among the 775 species are included some of the most brilliantly colored, sweetest voiced and most unusual birds in the world.

Along the northeast coast is the bower bird, which adorns its nest and decorates its playing ground with shells, seeds, and other bright objects, not despoiling brass buttons and cartridge cases.

The lyre bird, famous for its plumage, is the rival of the mockingbird of the South in sweetness of tone and skill as a mimic. The crow shrike ("magpie"), the brown flycatcher ("jacky winter"), the bush warbler, the rock warbler, the reed warbler, the bush lark, the cuckoo, the honey eater, and the "willy wagtail," constitute parts of a bird chorus difficult to surpass. Cockatoos are as common in Australia as crows in the Central West; even in the desert flocks are frequently seen. Some of them are excellent talkers, most of them gorgeously dressed.

A most surprising bird is the kangaroo, or jumping jackass. At once in the quiet bush come loud peals of uproarious, laughing laughter. One is not inclined to join in the merriment. It seems a laugh and wail as if an idiot boy were disturbing a congregation in church. When the source of the laughter is located it turns out to be a silly looking bird with clumsy, square body and open mouth, sitting unconcernedly on a stump.

The little mouse by the roadside, and the placid black-necked stork, or jabiru, standing 5 feet high, inhabit the swamps of the northern coast, while the cat-eaters and larks. The cat-eaters and the bush turkey hold records of miles, flocks and earth 5 to 10 feet high. The eggs are laid in burrows excavated in the ground and are left to be hatched by the heat resulting from decomposing vegetable matter—a home-made community incubator.

The kangaroo of the forests of Queensland and Papua and the emu, which is found throughout the continent, are unknown outside the Australian region. The emu is the national bird and shares with the kangaroo the task of upholding the shield on the commonwealth coat of arms. It is a powerful bird and can run at the rate of 15 to 20 miles an hour.

BRYANT POND

Otis Dudley is attending the University of Maine.

Miss Ruby Willard has gone to Minot Corner where she has a position as teacher.

Mrs. James D. Farnum is ill with neuritis in her arm. Her aunt, Mrs. Abbie Holt of Auburn, is with her.

The Misses Rath and Alice Merrill of Dixfield were Sunday guests of Miss Velma Brown. They were accompanied by Virginia Bryant of Wilton and Ralph Merrill, also of Dixfield.

Mrs. Homer Farnum and baby have returned from a recent visit at Gorham, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnard of Massachusetts are visiting this week at Mrs. Howard Emery's.

Mr. and Mrs. Houghton and two daughters of Somerville, Mass., have returned to their home after visiting Mrs. Houghton's mother, Mrs. Edwin Perlman.

Miss Mae Coolidge of East Bethel is rooming at Charles Dunham's and attending Woodstock High.

Miss Florence Whitman and Mrs. George Cummings were in Lewiston Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Stearns and son Karl of Bethel were Sunday callers at Omar Brown's.

The Church and Christian Endeavor services will be resumed this Sunday, Sept. 23.

"PIGS" IS HUMAN COMEDY

Nydia Westman Delightful in Lakewood Play

Quite aside from its novelty "Pigs" which The Lakewood Players are sponsoring this week with Nydia Westman as the star, has a definite appeal which will, no doubt, attract large audiences to the theatrical resort these fine late summer evenings. Its novelty lies principally in the fact that six, live, grunting porkers are much the center of interest during the second act, and, thanks to Miss Westman's ability to train them in the ways of perfect stage deportment, they are a half-dozen cute reasons why everyone will be delighted with this perfectly balanced comedy.

Although the pigs do not appear on the stage until the second act, they form the basis of the plot. Such a homey theme is rich in possibilities and authors, Patterson McNutt and Anne Morrison, have left no stone unturned in taking advantage of every moment the curtain is up. Essentially a comedy, there is still much that is good drama in "Pigs," and there is one moment of suspense which will bring the most hardened playgoer to the edge of his seat.

"Pigs" is a John Golden Production. Two of Mr. Golden's plays have been regularly received at Lakewood this summer. Those who enjoyed (and who did not) "Two Girls Wanted" and "Seventh Heaven," may look to "Pigs" for the same quality and quantity of entertainment as typified these two remarkable successes. Broadway liked "Pigs" well enough to keep the Little Theatre jammed for a solid year, and Miss Westman made such an individual hit in it that she elevated to stardom.

The young actresses' performance in "Pigs" is splendid and she brings to the part of Mildred a charm and sincerity that lift it above a stage impersonation. The boy is played by Humphrey Bogart, who has established a wide following in Maine. His role in "Pigs" will net the young man many new friends.

The supporting cast is well selected including a dozen or more Lakewood favorites, new and old.

"Pigs" is wholesome fun, and you can be assured a roaring evening at Lakewood by seeing it.

MILTON

The Soap Club met Thursday with Mrs. Frances Lapham. A bountiful dinner was served by Mrs. Lapham. It was a very enjoyable time for all.

Mrs. George Faddock and daughter, Winona, and Chilton Bickford of So. Portland spent the week end at Clarence Jackson's.

Charles Wilson is reported very sick at this time with heart trouble. His many friends hope for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Clara Riddon and daughter, Dora Jackson, visited at Charles Jackson's recently.

Mrs. Joe George's brother and nephew of Massachusetts have been staying with her or a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Buck and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Poland enjoyed a trip around the mountains Saturday and Sunday.

We promise you a new thrill

When you dip a brush in this magic transformer of your home!

LACQUER is a comparatively new kind of paint

—well, here is a new kind of lacquer.

If you've ever had lacquer "drag" under your brush—or dry so quickly that ugly laps and brushmarks were left—you'll be surprised at the way Bay State Brushing Lacquer almost paints itself!

And a year after the job is done (whether it's Baby's crib or the icebox) you'll still be surprised. For Bay State Brushing Lacquer gives you a finish so smooth, so hard, so brilliant that it defies the hardest kind of wear.

We've been surprised ourselves at the quantities of Bay State Brushing Lacquer we sell!

Whether you're painting your house or lacquering a chair, there is a Bay State Paint and Varnish Product especially designed for that particular job—and perfected in the great Bay State laboratories to do that job as well as it can be done. Come in and let us demonstrate them for you.
